PelletSales.com now delivers wood pellets to Buffalo, NY area, helps residents control heating costs

Goffstown, NH; Buffalo NY, May 11, 2009: Buffalo-area residents now have the option of having their renewable, green, and efficient heating fuels delivered right to their door, thanks to PelletSales.com and the biomass fuel company's ever-expanding delivery area.

"In Western New York, there is tremendous demand for wood pellets, which are an efficient, renewable, and affordable heating fuel," said Jon Strimling, President and CEO of PelletSales.com. "We're thrilled to be able to give residents there one more way to fight back against dependence on foreign oil."

"Wood pellets are produced at local mills and distributed through local transportation networks, creating American jobs and heating local homes," Strimling said. "The fuel is one of the most price-stable and environmentally-friendly available, making heating with wood pellets a no-brainer, as many New York residents are already aware," he said.

Strimling's company is also alerting homeowners that oil pricing is again on the rise, with futures markets projecting oil will break the $62 a barrel mark by fall – just in time to take a toll on many homeowners' pockets. Conversely, PelletSales.com is currently offering wood pellets at season-low prices.

"With oil prices already up 20 to 30 cents per gallon-two seasons before the fuel is even needed-consumers are right to brace for impact," Strimling said.
